The Power of Word of Mouth

McKinsey & Company

“The rewards of pursuing excellence in word-of-mouth are huge, and it can deliver a significant competitive edge few other marketing approaches can match”

“It’s the most disruptive factor in marketing”

“Marketing-induced consumer-to-consumer word of mouth generates more than twice the sales of paid advertising”

McKinsey Quarterly, April, 2010

We See Two Opportunities in “Social Media” for Advertisers

- “Straight up” social media
 - Facebook
 - Twitter
 - FourSquare
 - LinkedIn
 - And so many others....

- “Traditional media” that have “social value”
 - Television
 - Radio
 - Print
 - “Traditional” internet

It's all about starting productive conversations!

Leading Sources of “Social Value”

- The Message
 - WOM only happens when the message is talkworthy
- The “Audience”
 - Well connected
 - Frequent recommenders
 - Reliant on media/advertising
 - Trusted sources
- The Medium
 - Makes sharing easy
 - Reaches people in “social context”
 - Reaches people in “relevant context”

Social networking sites excel at some, but not all these values

All Media Are Social!

The “two-step flow” (1955)

- “Media have only ‘limited effects’ in the process of mass persuasion”
 - “A campaign of persuasion is more likely to reinforce than convert”
- “Messages are filtered through social networks and vetted in the light of group norms”
 - “Where you find an opinion leader, you are bound to find a conversation”
 - “Try to identify the points at which media enter the conversation”

Implications

- Consumer decision making is fundamentally “social”
 - Consumers value most the advice they get from other people, and are highly engaged in seeking recommendations
 - It is part of what makes us human, and it’s always been an important part of how mass communications work.
- The dynamics of offline and online WOM: quite different
 - Be wary of projecting from online conversation to “all” conversation
- All media are social
 - A wide variety of media are able to reach “social” consumers
 - Look for audiences with lots of social relationships—offline as well as online
 - Audiences containing more “influencers” have the most social value
 - “Social network” investments should be integrated with broader strategies for media, marketing, and advertising
